TWO ARE SHOT WHILE HUNTING BAD INDIANS

OFFICERS WOUND EACH OTHER THROUGH MISTAKE IN THE DARKNESS.

Refuge Murderer Shoots Deputy's Horse in Chase Near Wynnewood.

Wynnewood, Okla., Aug. 3.—Will Hendrix, a notorious half breed Choctaw Indian, who, after being sentenced to a life term in the penitentiary for murder escaped from the federal jail at Paris, Tex., June 17, who was being followed by Deputy Sheriff Lobald four miles north of here yesterday, turned upon the officer and shot his horse from under him and then made his escape.

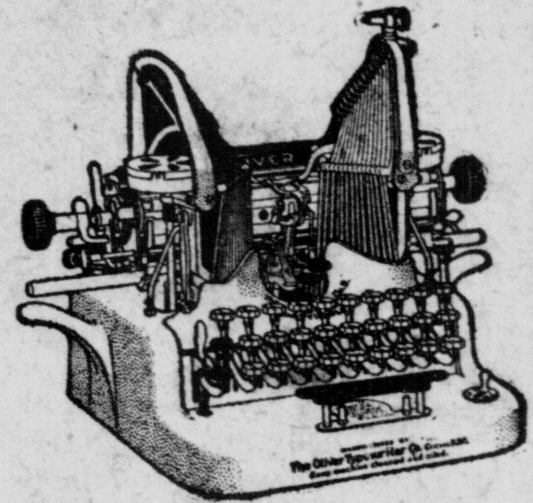

Last night posses joined in a further search for Hendrix and in the darkness, about four miles northeast of Wynnewood, Deputies James Russell and Joseph Boren each wounded the other through mistake. They had become separated and each took the other for Hendrix and they crawled step by step through the darkness. Russell was shot in the head and received a serious wound and Boren was shot in the hand. Other officers arrived on the scene in time to rectify the mistake before the men did further damage.

Killed His Father-in-Law.

Today officers are searching the country to the east and northeast of here and it is possible that Hendrix will be recaptured unless he escapes from this part of the country. He has relatives in this community and formerly resided near Roff and it is believed he has a hiding place in the vicinity of Roff.

the Choctaw nation in 1906. His case was transferred to the United States court of the northern district of Texas and he was convicted. While in the federal jail Hendrix's physician recommended exercise and the prisoner was given the privilege of the cell corridor. Through some means a saw was slipped into the jail and Hendrix severed the bars and escaped. He took several blank-

His escape was not discovered for several hours. It is believed that relatives in Oklahoma aided in the escape and that they furnished him a horse at Red River. Hendrix has often declared that he would kill one of the witnesses who testified against him in the trial. This witness resides near Roff and after the escape of Hendrix asked the authorities for protection. Hendrix was also well acquainted with James Miller, one of the men who was hanged by a mob at Ada, and the Indian is believed to have been implicated in the murder of A. A. Bobbitt, a cattleman of near Ada.

WANTS NO DUTY ON COTTON BAGGING

SENATOR CULBERSON PRESSES
AMENDMENT TO PENDING TARIFF BILL.

Senator Bailey Raises No Objection to Aldrich's Plan to Vote on Tariff Bill Thursday.

Washington, Aug. 3.—In the light of history, as made by the Dingley law, the last hope of getting the duty on all shoes reduced to 10 per cent will go glimmering at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon if the senate, according to a program suggested by Senator Aldrich today, will vote to adopt the conference report on the tariff bill without passing a concurrent resolution to take the joker out of the boot and shoe schedule.

That plan is to put off the proposed resolution until the regular session of congress and then include in the resolution the putting of cotton bagging on the free list. At least Mr. Aldrich wants the senate to make his promise that such a program will be carried out. This abiding faith in his word of mouth the Rhode Island Senator hopes to find in two quarters—the White House and among certain senators who are anxious to carry to their constituents, if not the substance of free cotton bagging at least a promise

Past Tariff Promises.

What such a promise amounts to, even disregarding all the broken pledges of the Rhode Island senator in the making of this tariff bill, may be judged by the promises made in regard to the Dingley law. Rates in that act were increased 20 per cent in order to afford trading margin in the reciprocity treaties which the act authorized the president to make with the consent of the senate, yet when the treaties were negotiated the same senate refused to ratify the treaties and consumer was forced to pay the 20 per cent increase in the rates. What chance there will be to reopen the tariff question next December after this tariff agitation is well out of the way, in order to put cotton bagging on the free list and to reduce the tariff on shoes from 15 to 10 per cent, must be discernible even to the obtuse without digging up past tariff promises of the republican leaders for guidance.

Culbertson Opposes Plan.

Senator Culbertson, apparently, was not lured by such a scheme. When the senate finally got a quorum today he opened the fight for free cotton bagging now, presenting an amendment to place cotton bagging on the free list, which he said he intended to offer as an amendment to the proposed concurrent resolution to reduce the tariff on shoes from 15 to 10 per cent. He pointed out how the senate a few weeks ago had voted in good faith to put cotton bagging on the free list, and his amendment, he said, was intended to correct the manifest injustice which was done in conference when that article was put on the dutiable list.

Repeated attempts to draw out Senator Aldrich in open session as to whether he would offer the concurrent resolution in question, failed. Probably he has made promises that the senate shall be given an opportunity to vote on a concurrent resolution directing the enrolling clerk to correct the bill so as to provide the desired reduction in the rates.
If this is done after the senate has adopted the conference report it will be because President Taft still holds the whip handle and could refuse to sign the measure unless corrected by a concurrent resolution. With the Western range Senators satisfied as to leather and shoes, it would be easy for Aldrich and his supporters to vote down amendments covering cotton bagging or other articles.

Despite the general impression, however, of the concurrent resolution it will make its appearance after the conference report has been adopted.

Well posted Senators tonight express serious doubt whether the promised effort to reduce the boot and shoe rate will be made. Speaker Cannon, when approached by an anxious representative on the subject, said no concurrent resolution would be put through the house until after the senate has adopted it.

Proposed Daily Filibuster.

The developments in the Senate today indicate that Senator Bailey has given up all idea of conducting a long filibuster in behalf of free cotton bagging. It was at his suggestion that the senate agreed to Senator Aldrich's motion to vote on the conference report Thursday afternoon.
Senator Aldrich had attempted to get the senate to agree to 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon as the time for voting on the report, but instantly there were signs of probable objection on the part of Senator Bacon.
Then Senator Bailey got up and intimated that the Aldrich suggestion was satisfactory. Thereupon there was no objection from Mr. Bacon, and thus, with Senator Bailey's aid, Senator Aldrich was able to fix a date for a vote on the bill without regard to any arrangements in open senate about the introduction or vote on the rumored concurrent resolution.

Ada.

Three things characterize the Christian people of our little city, namely, individuality, courage and initiative. Our churches are endeavoring to stand in the very forefront in the demonstration of these characteristics and some of the chief exponents of these principles are to be found in our pulpits. Such leaders as C.
Stubblefield, W. M. Wilson, J. D.
White, C. M. Smootz, and Rev.
Barnhardt, are catching the vision of the age and are bringing things to pass by applying methods to conditions. They are wide-awake and abreast of the times. They drive at the heart of conditions. They don't al-

No Coats in Court Room.

Guthrie, Ok., August 3.—Formality will be dispensed with by the criminal court of appeals during the heated term and the requirements of coats in the court room which has prevailed in both of the appellate courts of Oklahoma has been suspended as far as criminal court is concerned. The members of the court set the precedent by themselves appearing on the bench without coats.
The example was immediately followed by court officials, attorneys and spectators and shirtwaists are now very much in style. The court room occupied by the criminal court is on the west of the building and the sessions of the court are usually of this combination was that the heat was almost unbearable for lawyers and litigants which conformed to the usual court requirements in the matter of attire.

TO IRON WHITE UNDERSKIRT.

Directions That Will Result in Perfect Success if They Are Implicitly Followed.

To iron a white underskirt, begin at the strings and waistband, then take the bottom of the skirt. Iron all round on the right side with a very hot iron, then iron the first frill. This frill will probably have sewed work or lace; in either case it must be nicely ironed on the wrong side.

Probably above the frill there will be tucks or hems; they must next be ironed over the wrong side, afterward on the right; rub the iron the way of the hem.

If there is a second frill the cloth under the frill is ironed at the same time as the hem or tucks and the frill again ironed on the wrong side. Put skirtboard into the skirt and place each end of the board on a table, thus allowing the skirt to hang over the board. It can thus be easily ironed and nicely finished. Afterward fold it lengthwise and hang up to air. When folded, let the band be turned down twice and the bottom of the skirt be outside.

If the skirt is of fine muslin with lace frills or fine frills, it ought to be starched with ordinary hot water starch, then hung up to dry. When nearly dry sprinkle with water and roll up tightly for a few hours till it all becomes equally damp; then iron as directed above.

If possible, the clothes should be steamed and turned in front of a good, lasting fire, if not, they should be hung up in a warm room. On warm, sunny days this airing may be done out of doors, care being taken that the clothes are brought in before the dew begins to fall. If the process of airing clothes is neglected it may cause serious results, even endanger lives.

FOR THE BEST FRYING FAT.

Mixture Is Better Than the Pure Lard
—Beef Suet Has a Distinct Value.

The best frying fat is not pure lard, but lard mixed with half its weight of clarified drippings, beef, veal or chicken. Of course they should have no vegetable flavor and no smoked meat drrippings. Beef suet may be purchased and tried out and mixed with lard. It is not good to use by itself, because it is more liable to smoke into the food that is being cooked. To clarify choice drippings, soak 24 hours in cold water, changing twice, then cut and melt in water or milk and water, allowing one-half a cup of milk to every pound of fat.

Fat should always be kept in tinware, never in earthen. Agate is not good for fat cooking. When you have finished the daily frying, strain the fat into a clean tin can. The tin can is made to test the temperature of the fat when frying, there are two tests used by cooks that are practical. One of them consists in heating the fat until a blue smoke commences to rise from the center, then drop in a piece of stale bread, which should brown in a moment. A piece of potato may be used in place of the bread. A frying basket, in which foods can be lifted from the fat, shaken and drained, is a great convenience to any one who does much deep fat frying. When taking up fried articles lay for a moment on a cheesecloth square or clean brown paper to absorb the superfluous fat.

Cooking Instructions.

Never grease your pie plate or tin.
There should be enough lard in your pie crust to prevent it from sticking to the plate. By mixing a two-quart pail of flour and lard for pie crust on a day when you have not much to do, baking day is made easier. Also when you want to make one pie in a hurry it saves time and labor to add only water and roll out the crust. If one has a large family or bakes many pies it would be all right to mix larger quantities. In warm weather it is best to mix about what would be used in a week or ten days.

Chocolate Apple Custard.

Stew apple quarters until clear, but do not let them cook to pieces, and line a pudding dish about two-thirds full. In another bowl mix one cup of hot milk, four whole eggs, two tablespoons of grated chocolate and about two tablespoons of sugar. Flavor the apple sauce with lemon and the custard with vanilla. Pour the custard slowly over the apple sauce, put the pudding dish in a pan of water and bake in moderate oven until the custard is done. Serve with whipped cream. This makes a delicious dessert for six or eight people.

Cold Bean Croquettes.

Here is a nice way of using cold beans in croquettes: I get them ready at night, so it takes just a moment to cook them for breakfast. Mash two cups baked beans, yolks of one or two eggs, one tablespoon melted butter, pinch of salt. Form into cones.
Roll in cracker crumbs. I do not coat with egg, as they are rather moist, and I find the cracker crumbs stick on all right.—Boston Globe.

Adds Flavor to Cherries.

A delicious flavor is added to the maraschino cherries used in or as a decoration for a fruit or other salad by stuffing them with pecan meats chopped rather coarse.

Blemishes from Wall Paper.

A great many blemishes on wall paper may be removed with a rubber on a lead pencil.

Bleach Ivory in the Sun.

After cleaning ivory expose it to the sun. This assists in bleaching it.

"HER SECOND WIND"

By W. C. SCOTT

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Out of the night that covers me, Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

She stood at the window and looked out into the street, her form displayed to advantage in a close-fitting suit (her last; all the others had been sold) of stylish cut, against the daylight glare.

"Wait for my second wind?" she scornfully cried; "I'd starve!"

"There's Van Court; but not that!"
She gazed into the mirror at a white, haggard face, illuminated by two wild eyes. The reflection startled her. She impulsively pressed her fingers to her eyes and shuddered. Then she clenched her white hands—fear should not shake her resolve. Death must be welcome; the uncertainty of the nature of the hereafter could not alter her intention. The frowns of Fortune had driven her on. Surely it was not her fault if she was not superior to the ills of life that menaced her. Her life was her own; she had no further use for it, and would end it all. With a steady hand she opened the dresser drawer (empty) and took out a small bottle. Fascinated, she gazed at the label, and with a strange exultation she read: "Carbolic acid."

"It was the cheapest—and it is certain!" She put the bottle down and her eyes fell upon her check book.
She smiled bitterly. "Oh, I'm so hungry, but of what use are you to me?" She picked the book up aimlessly, and at the contact a hot thought hissed into her bewildered brain. Her eyes glared and her cheeks flared a dull red. "Why not?
Why not?" she panted. Now her limbs were trembling, and she sat down abruptly. But in an instant she stood up rigid, the thought still hissing in her brain.

"I'll do it!—It is—my—second—wind!"

And then a hopeless expression clouded the glitter in her eyes and she sank limply back into the chair moaning: "No, no! Let me think!"

Suddenly a harsh exclamation leaped from her dry lips. She leaped to her feet and ran across the room to the dresser.

"I'm getting it—my second wind," the woman panted.

She looked at the face in the mirror with new interest. It was pale, but calm, determined; and the large eyes were steady, resolute and fearless. Defiantly she rearranged her hair; put on her hat and veil, and taking the check book went into the hall.

"Oh, Mrs. Warner, I wonder if you would allow me to wear your furs down town. I have some good news.
You know where my own are."

"Why, my dear girl, of course you can. I hope it will be your second wind, as you call it. And, now, when you come back I want you to stay for supper, Miss Roberts," invited Mrs.
Warner, as she brought the furs.

"Thank you; oh, thank you so much! I know this will turn out all right. It has got to," she whispered to herself as she ran down to the street. She looked very stylish, and as she turned into Macbeth-Ward's piano store, the manager himself sprang forward to open the door.

"A piano? Ah, yes. Please step this way, lady. Here is an elegant upright, mahogany, for $800, five per cent. off for cash."

"Yes, lady, the first tuning is free of charge. You would like to hear its tone? Simpson; here, please."

"I would like a higher tone," declared Miss Roberts.

"We will change it," said the manager.

"Thank you. Then, I'll take this instrument. You will deliver it tomorrow? Oh, the next day; very well.
The address—Miss Nanie Roberts, 1728 Fairview place. You said five per cent. off for cash? I'll pay you now; the amount is, let me see—$760.
Isn't that right?" she asked as she produced the check book. The manager bowed and handed her an elegant fountain pen. She smiled deprecatingly, and pushed the check book over to him.

"Would you mind filling it out? I'm not familiar with the—the—thank you so much." He wrote the check and she signed it. Then, smiling, he bowed her out with an elaborate flourish.

"I don't know her, and she was easy, so I just raised it a hundred," laughed the manager to his assistant.
"Good instrument, though."

At four o'clock the next day there was a hurried rap on Miss Roberts' door. She drew a quick breath, opened it and confronted a small boy who thrust an envelope into her hand.
She broke the seal.

It contained a note and her check.
The note ran: "Some error—no funds; please call, Macbeth-Ward's Piano Co."
"I'll arrange to drop in to-morrow," she said to the boy, and closed the door. Flushed and trembling, she rushed to the window and inspected the returned check. Yes, thank goodness!—there was the piano company's bold indorsement on the back; and the bank teller had neglected to mark the check. She hurried out and down to the bank (not the same bank). In an hour she was seated in a parlor car steaming away from self-destruction and the town she hated to think about. On her pale face was a happy smile, and the cause in her pocket, a roll of greenbacks she had wisely exchanged gold for. "Of two sins I chose the lesser, and one I can undo some day," and she added, softly:
"I have my second wind."

ISSUE LINCOLN CENTS.

New Pennies Issued Today Bear the Head of Lincoln. Indian Bygone.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Lo, the poor red man! Not only has he been driven from his native land, but he is also to be banished from the coinage of the country, if the defraud for the new Lincoln cents issued today, continues at the present rate.

Distribution of the copper coins bearing the head of "Honest Abe" instead of that of the Indian which has ornamented them so long was commenced today, with a brisk demand. The cents were coined at the Philadelphia mint, but the San Francisco money factory will soon add to the supply.

There is now more than $16,500,000 of the Indian-head coin outstanding, and the retirement will be slow, for the reason that banks will be required to pay transportation charges from the mint, whereas the old pennies, in amounts of $20 or more, are delivered free by the sub-treasuries.

The Lincoln cent is the idea of former President Roosevelt, who commissioned Victor Drenner of New York, to design the piece. In speaking of his work, Mr. Drenner said:

"If you will observe the Lincoln cent carefully, you will see that I have made him smiling. I wanted to show the sunshine as well as the goodness of his life. My intention has been to present a situation in which Lincoln might have appeared at his best. Finally I imagined him as talking to a child. That is the face on the coin. A man or woman is natural when speaking to a child.
When adults converse they are usually on guard, but in talking to children faces relax and are at their best. I am glad the head will appear on the cent, the piece of money most familiar to the masses. It was Lincoln who said that God must love the common people because he had made so many of them. I had rather have the head on the cent than on the $20 gold piece.

Mr. Drenner came to this country as a poor boy twenty years ago.
His father in Russia had taught him engraving, but until he learned enough English to make himself understood he did not know where to

The Indian head, in use for more than a generation on the cent and now to be discontinued, is to share the fate of its predecessor, the eagle for the reason that it is easily counterfeited. Early in the present year the government decided on a change, but even then it was proposed to place the head of Lincoln on a silver coin, probably the half dollar. Mr.
Drenner submitted his designs at Washington. The head was then assigned to the cent.

THE EAST FIGHTS LABORS LAWS

COM. DAUGHERTY SOUNDS KEY-NOTE OF ORGANIZATION'S STAND.

Haskell Shirt-Sleeve Incident Approved—Sympathy for Warren.

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 3.—If all capital were destroyed in a night, and labor turned loose in this great state with all the natural resources of the earth, it would soon produce capital and there would be none of the idle, luxurious drones now possessing a monopoly of all its vast resources. The very things that were written by the laboring people and caused to become the organic law of this state through their efforts, are today being fought by the corporations of the east who have capital invested in Oklahoma.

This was the keynote of the address of State Labor Commissioner Charles L. Daugherty delivered this afternoon before the state federation of labor that is in annual session. This address was the principal feature of the afternoon.

Following the address of Commissioner Daugherty, the convention adopted a resolution condemning an article in a morning paper criticising the appearance of Gov. Haskell in his shirt sleeves at the Brady banquet last night.

Reports of the officers containing mostly statistical matter were then read and adopted by the convention.

In another resolution the sympathy of the organization was extended to Fred Warren, editor of the Appeal to Reason, under conviction for misuse of the mails.

Carpenters Elect Officers.

The Oklahoma state council of carpenters and joiners was formally organized with the officers: President, George Walker, Cherokee; first vice president, D. E. Ballard, Oklahoma City; second vice president D. A. Ferguson, Ardmore; third vice president, C. R. Mumau, McAlester; secretary-treasurer, George McConnell, Bartlesville; executive committee, Julius P. Pieh, Enid; Christopher Hickman, Chickasha; S. S. Bowser, Sapulpa.

J. Y. Calahan of Enid, fraternal delegate of the farmers' union organization, explained the plan of the invitation for the convention to meet in Enid next year.

Twelfth Street Busy.

Twelfth street is lined with street pavers today thus 12th street progress is contributing to the support of Main street for a season, since the 12th street laborers will buy from the Main street merchant, but is it not within the range of possibility that such a condition may be reversed later.

Isn't it about time for Main street to wake up?

Decision Friday.

It was officially announced this afternoon that United States Judge Campbell will render a decision on 154 land cases Friday. The main question is the authority of the United States to bring suit. Should the demurrers of the defendants be sustained, 30,000 land cases brought by the government against owners of Indian lands will practically be dropped.

Hon. J. B. Dickerson.

Hon. J. B. Dickerson, mayor of Turner Falls, of which he is reputed to be the lone resident, also erstwhile press agent for Davis, Okla., during which time he achieved the national reputation of being the "Davis Liar" is in the city.

Mr. Dickerson is the state manager of the Ellsworth Company of New York, introducing the DeForest Wireless system. He will hold forth at the 25,000 club rooms tonight. President Lucas of the club bespeaks for him a full house of citizens. Mr. Dickerson is a live wire and evidently has something interesting to present.

Penitentiary Construction Fund.

Guthrie, Ok., Aug. 3.—A committee representing the Board of Control, Board of Affairs, State Auditor and Attorney general, considered about $90,000 in claims against the penitentiary construction fund and agreed that the maintenance of the institution should be charged with about $11,000. The legislative appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30 was short but as the convicts were being worked on penitentiary construction fund will be on a basis of actual cost and pay of guards, and 20c per day for each convict.

MUNDEN DENIES WRIT TO MINGLE

TURN'S DOWN APPLICATION OF PRISONER IN HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS.

Slayer of Pearl Pearson Bursts Into Tears When Decision Is Heard.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 4.—The application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Forest Cecil Mingle, convicted slayer of Pearl Pearson, was denied in the superior court at 5:45 o'clock last evening by Superior Judge A. N. Munden.

Immediately upon hearing the judge's verdict Mingle burst into tears, as he exclaimed: "Good God, when will this persecution end so that I may return to my wife and baby." Closely guarded by four deputy sheriffs, the youthful prisoner was returned to his cell in the county jail while a crowd of curious spectators, prominent among which was a large number of women, loitered about the jail after the convicted man had been locked up following the denial of the habeas corpus writ.

It is probable that Mingle will be taken to the state prison at McAlester this afternoon to begin serving the life sentence imposed by the jury.

In denying the writ of habeas corpus, Judge Munden took exceptions to the application of the defendant in stating that Judge Carney's absence from the county during the progress of the famous trial had terminated the proceedings. The contention of County Attorney Rear-Admiral, that the absence of Judge Carney in returning to his home at El Reno, had no effect or influence upon the jury in the rendition of its verdict was upheld.

Attorney E. J. Giddings, in behalf of Mingle, filed notice of appeal from the judge's decision and was granted two days in which to prepare for further proceedings.

HE LICKS THE EDITOR.

Johnston Takes Offense at Article and Whips the Writer.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3.—Adjutant General Phillip P. Johnston of the Kentucky national guard, today cabled Denny B. Goode, editor of a weekly social-political paper.

The general took offense at the editorial reference in the paper to him as "General Peacock P. Johnston" and an epigrammatic remark that Johnston is a man "who spells in capitals and 'you' in agate type."

The editorial referred to the recent resignation of Col. W. B. Haldeman and over 30 of the officers of the First Kentucky regiment after friction with the office of General Johnston.

Goode was arrested. The trial will be held tomorrow. The affair has created a sensation all over the state.

State Game Warden's Report.

Guthrie, Ok., Aug. 3.—State Game Warden Askew filed his monthly report with the secretary of state, today, showing there had been forty-four arrests during the month for violations of the game and fish law. There were fourteen convictions or pleas of guilty, in which $480 in fines was assessed, and of this amount state game and fish warden's department received $135. Fourteen of the cases were dismissed, the remainder are pending in the courts. The warden and his deputies issued 1,103 licenses to residents and four to nonresidents.

Oklahoma Labor Federation.

Tulsa, Aug. 3.—The convention of the state federation of labor passed a resolution extending sympathy to Fred Warren, convicted editor of the Appeal to Reason, and condemning the government for its prosecution of Warren. Charles L. Daugherty, state labor commissioner, addressed the convention this afternoon.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. DENTAL FORCEPS IN ANTIQUITY.

Proof That They Existed, But No Specimens Are in Existence.

Dr. Sudhoff not long ago read a paper before the Leipzig Medical society on dental forceps in antiquity. He said that even before the time of Hippocrates reference to the use of such instruments are found, but no specimens are met with among the surgical implements belonging to classical times that have been discovered. This can only be due to the material of which they were made. Unlike the mass of other Graeco-Roman surgical instruments, which were nearly all of bronze, the dental forceps of antiquity must have been made of iron or steel, although no medical writer mentions the fact. In the Aristotelian "Mechanical Problems," however, there is a passage which, according to Dr. Sudhoff, has hitherto been overlooked, in which it is mentioned as a familiar fact that dental forceps were made of iron. In the museum at Homburg, where there is an almost unrivaled collection of iron implements, two steel-plated dental forceps, one for the upper, the other for the lower jaw, have been found. That dental forceps should have formed part of the armamentarium of a military surgeon in a remote outpost shows in what common use the instrument was.—British Medical Journal.

Angeline Gives Charles a Little Lesson

"Hello!" he cried. And as he entered the room he gave every evidence of being a worthy young man who was sure of his welcome, walking with a certain boisterous step and beaming till he shamed the sunbursts; but as for her, she sat in a chair reading a letter, and when she glanced up at him her gaze was cold and incurious.

"O," said she; "good evening."

"Good evening?" he said, stopping in his tracks and blinking his eyes; "good evening?"

"Yes," she said, glancing down again at the letter; "good evening."

"Why, Angeline!" he cried, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing," said she, "is the matter."

"Nothing?"

"Nothing!"

"Well, then!" he said. "Why—why don't you come and kiss your little tiddleywinks?"

And though his voice fell from the quaver of astonishment to the low notes of pleading, and though he stood with his arms thrown out and his head thrown back, and though he glanced down at her from an angle which had always ravished her heart before, she only gave him that cold and incurious look—a look which seemed to say, "Now I suppose there are some persons who might consider your attitude very fetching, but as for me, well, I think it is ridiculous—that's all."

Whereupon she returned to her letter, and when she had finished it she smiled a far-off smile of a dreamy quality and tore the letter into very little bits.

"Now, Charles," she said, "there are a few things I wish to discuss with you. In the first place, I cannot and I will not stand a jealous person!"

"But I'm not jealous!" said the astonished Charles.

"On the contrary," she said, "you are extremely jealous! Extremely so! Now, last night, because I spoke to Jimmy a few times, you showed such unmistakable signs of jealousy that I—I feared for the future!"

And as she remarked that she feared for the future, it was all she could do to hide the pride she felt at saying those fatal words, and she gave our Charles a look that plainly said, "There! How's that?"

"I feared for the future!" she said. "Yes, I feared for the future."

"But it was the way you looked at watching you, too, and—"

"Charles!" she said. "Be careful! I warn you! Be careful!"

"Well, anyhow," grumbled Charles, "it was the way you looked at him."

"The way I looked at him?"

"Yes, the way you looked at him!"

"Why, how did I look at him?"

"You know how you looked at him!"

"Charles! I insist that you must not contradict me! It seems that you have taken umbrage—umbrage at the way I looked at James last night, and I insist that you show me how I looked at him."

"Well," said Charles (late Tiddleywinks), grumbling again, "you looked at him like this!"

"Do it again," said Angeline.

And Charles did it again.

"Then all I can say," said Angeline, "is that I must have been ill!"

"You didn't look ill," said Charles.

"I didn't?"

"No; you looked healthy!"

"Charles, are you trying to joke with me? Because, if you are, I wish to say that you are joking on a very serious subject—a very serious subject!"

"Aw, Angeline, don't take it like that. I'm awfully sorry!"

"Sorry!"

"Honestly and truly I am. You can look at Jimmy all you want to, after this, and I won't say a word!"

"Yes! And I suppose you'll run all around kissing Arabella like you did last night!"

And as for Charles, Charles looked equally earnest and guilty.

"Now I'll just tell you how that happened," he said. "She was mad and I was mad at the way we—we—thought you looked at Jimmy, and when she got up to go and you kissed her goodby, I said, 'Don't I get one, too?' and first thing I knew—well, she kissed me!"

"O, she kissed you, did she?"

"Yes! Puckered her lips and kissed me!"

"Mm!" said Angeline.

"Why, I was never more surprised at anything in all my life!"

"Mm!"

"Why, you could have knocked me down with a feather!"

"Mm!"

"Of course, I was only joking, but when she took me up like that—!"

"Mm!"

"Angeline!"

"Yes, Charles?"

"Do you forgive me?"

"Will you promise me never to be jealous again if I forgive you?"

"Honestly and truly."

"And you'll never kiss her again?"

"O, never!"

"And never let her kiss you again?"

And just before a rapturous chirping arose and fell and rose again the hero of this tale whose name is Charles (and whose other name is man) cried out in loud and virtuous tones:

"I'll never, never, never let her kiss me again!"

MADE MRS. CULLEN FEEL PROUD

Pat's Ailment a Grand Large Disease for a Small Man.

A Chicago physician says that he was once called to visit a sick man named Cullen, living in a tenement. Just before the doctor took his departure a number of the residents of the place dropped in to hear the verdict.

"Well, me friends," said Mrs. Cullen, with an air of modest triumph, "the docther here says Pat has an attack of plural pneumonia. 'Docther,' says I to him, 'ain't you exaggeratin' a troifle, for, to me way of thinkin' Pat is too shmall a man for thot. Single pneumonia, I believe, is all there'd be room in him for.'"

"But the docther stands by his decision. Sure, it's a grand, large disease for such a shmall man as Pat."

And the woman's attitude showed the conscious pride that she felt.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

There is Full Proof of This One.

"We have lots of curious 'last requests' from patients who are about to have operations performed," said a nurse in the women's surgical ward of one of the New York hospitals, "but I thought about the last word had been said on this subject one day last evening to the operations I used to come to her and asked me to write two postal cards to her husband, so that she might sign them before the operation. One was to read: 'My dear husband: The operation was at ten this morning and I am getting along fine!' The other one was: 'My dear husband: The operation was at ten this morning and I am sorry to say I died. From your loving wife.'"

The Puzzle Craze.

"One of the curious things about this revival of the puzzle craze," remarked the man who notices "little things," "is the fact that I never have met a man or woman who plays with the cut-up pictures nowadays who knew them as a child. Whenever I have commented on the superior beauty and difficulty of the present-day puzzles over the ones I knew as a little boy the invariable response has been: 'It is curious, but I never saw any when I was a child.' I don't just know how my youthful social standing could have compared with theirs, but I do know the old-time picture puzzles were sold in the best shops in my city at that time."

The Unreal World of Comfort.

The more plain and satisfying our state appears, the more we may know that we are living in an unreal world. For the real world is not satisfying. The real world is full of bracing bewildering and brutal surprises. Comfort is the blessing and the curse of the English, and of Americans. With them it is a loud comfort, a wild comfort, a screaming and capering comfort; but comfort at bottom still. For there is but an inch of difference between the cushioned chamber and the padded cell.—Gilbert K. Chesterton.

An Admirable Profligate.

Hikealong Henry—Wot's happened to Measly Bill an' where did he git them new shoes?

Plodding Pete—Didn't you hear of Bill's windfall? He's got a wife some where that's sendin' him a dollar a week.

"Dollaf a week. Hully smoke! Wot'll he do with it?"

"Bill says he's goin' to spend every cent of it."

"Well, say, what do you think of that? Ain't he de wealthy voluptuary!"

The Persian Child's Rag Doll.

Persian children play almost exclusively with rag dolls, the clothes of which are put on to stay. She misses the pleasure of the American girl who dresses and undresses her doll most of the time.

A doll from the Sudan is cleverly described as a "rag and a bone and a hank of hair," and Sudanese dolls are characteristically greasy and dirty—would make cold shivers run up the kid backs of any French doll who saw them.—Bohemian Magazine.
